It was not like the case of men combining together from malice and to indues to another to break a contrast by inform ing him that they would hold him harmless The Attorney-General went on to cite a large number of authorities bearing upon the subject, and to quote extracts from the ruling of various judges in cases in some way relating to this. He argued that it was laid down by these decisions as necessary that the action of which the plaintiffs complained must be in itself illogal and wrongful, and must prejudicially affect some egal right belonging to them. The fact that i rould do some harm to their interests was not enough. He would submit that the petition would qualify either as a wrongful act, as one which amounted to a legal injury the plaintiffs. The right of the plaintiffs to exercise their calling must be understood only as co-extensive with, and not as overriding the righ of the blic or individuals from dealing with hem and at their pleasure. The right to buy or to refuse to buy was as much to be regarded as the right to sell or to refuse to sell. So the rights of the plaintiffs to trade or not with anyone was to be taken as co-extensive with and not overriding the rights of any of these individuals I they chose to say they would not trade with The plaintiff had only a right to deal with anyone who was willing to deal with him that was all. Of course if they had had recourse menaces or intimidation or any unlawful act to prevent those persons from dealing with them there would be a cause of action. or if they by such means prevented the laintiffs from dealing with the other persons. But all they were charged with doing was conspire—which was a strong word to use—or conederate together to put this proposition to theout side merchants-"We are strong and powerful. and we have agreed amongst ourselves that i you deal with the present plaintiffs in this suit we will not deal with you. If you think it will answer your purpose best to do so you will deal with them; if not you will deal with us." There was nothing in that proposition which amounted to a tort, nor anything which it would be illegal for any person to propose. That being so it was not legal for any number of persons to propose the same thing. It put no illegal pressure upon the plaintiffs, and infringed no legal right

There was not one thing alleged which would in itself form a cause of action. He should there the property of a howk or named he Afong, on fore submit that upon the face of the petition the 28th instant. Mr. Francis, instructed by Mr. Caldwell, for the plaintiff; Mr. Leach, instructed by Mossrs. Wotton and Deacon for the Crusader. Mr. Francis said this was a claim for damage y collision which was heard before the court on the 6th July last and the following days, in which judgment was entered in favour of the plaintiff against the Crusuder. The claim was for the value of the cavgo and junk, which were sunk by collision with the Crowder off Shawei shan Island in Marchlast. A reference was made to the Registrar and Merchants to assess the damages. The claim was there made up of $8,99) lat 870 per man, expenses of clearing the vessel A. P. McEwen examined into the plaintiff's claim and found the amount due to him to be $3,941.33. disallowing the claims for cargo and seamen's efforts on the ground, that, the owners had not been made purties to the action, and that the their behalf. They also, upon the evidence of Saptain E. Buenie, Lloyd's Surveyor, &c., cut down largely the amount of the claim for freight and for the volue of the junk, and disallowed the claim for elegrance expenses. Mr. rancis objected to the Registrar's report, first upon the ground of the total disallowance of the value of the cargo. That was a question which was never raised at the hearing of the case before the court, and the reference to the Registrar and merchants was upon the decree of the court-which had been given in favour of the plaintiff upon his claim for damages to hi that the Registrar had no power to deal with the question. He should also contend that in foreign port, both by the principle of Maritia and Common Law the captain was the prope eargo, with a special property in it, and the was no doubt that without any special auth rity from the owners he would be entitle take action one their behalf either trover or in definue. Although the captai. had no regular power of attorney there required ample evidence that he was acting with authority and approval of the owners of curgo, as he had produced affidavits from t attested by Mr nsul Sinclair, . ing cargo they had sall and by this junt, and value. He cited the can if the Ilos, Stanton 2.—That the defendants may be restrained by Master, quoted in Swaber, p. 100, and he su the order of this honourable court from interfer- mitted that the question of cargo should be ferred back to the Registrar to be investigated and reported upon. He pointed ov * lat otherthe parties the grave inconvenience of mother action. As to the next item, the volume of the junk, Mr. Francis contended that the Registrar ought to have acted upon the evidence the plaintiff and produced of the original cost of the junk, and what he had spent in refitting it a short time before the collision in preference to that of Captain Burnie, who admitted that he knew nothing about the cost of junks. Captain Burnie only stated that he knew vessels of a superior kind to this dunk were built in America at a cost of $10 a ton, ready for sea. Captain Burnie put the tonnage of this vessel at 200 He should submit that that in no way bere upon this case. The cost of building junk, at Foothow was quite a different matter to building vessels America. These junks were very solidly built, and had about three times the amount of timber in them that these vessels had, and they had not at Foochow the great ship building yards fitted with every modern appliance, where vessels were turned out very rapidly that they had in America. The question was what was the cost of such a vessel at Foochow, and the haintiff had told them that it would cost him rom $5,000 to $6,000 to replace his junk. Cap-The Burnio also stated that when vessels were years old the rale was to allow only two hirds the value. This junk was 20 years old, and he applied that principle to this junk. As o the men's clothing, the same arguments would upply to those as to the eargo. His Lordship said the amount appeared to ini syarcely reasonable. Mr. Francis pointed out that the collision ocours d in the winter time, when the men would probably have a large quantity of clothing with . n. As to the question of freight the defend. ant had produced no evidence to apply the posts tive testimony of the plaintiff. The evolution of Captain Burnie as to the rate for at easiers was evidence for junk freight fains a non-trialy

Mr. Leach said the claim for clearing expenses had been withdrawn before the Registrar, and he did not see how it could be brought forward again now. He submitted that not a single objection had been taken to the Registrar's report which could be austained. He want on to quote from Lushington's reports to show that the master of a ship could not be taken to represent the owners of cargo without special authority, and that unless the owners of cargo were made paries to this action the c'um for cargo could not be recovered. He arged that if dam gas were awarded on the claim for cargo and seamen's effects, brought morely by the captain, there was nothing to prevent the owners of cargo coming to the court afterwards and claiming the came amount over again which had been awarded to the captain on account of the value of the cargo. It was for the plaintiffs to decide whother or not they should bring a frosh action on account of the cargo be was acting on his own instructions with regard to it. As to the value of the junk the judgment upon such a matter was never set aside unless it was shown to he wrong or contrary to the facts. He contended that the decision of the Registrar had not been hown to be wrong or centrary to facts. He reat on to quote authorities bearing upon this oint, and then proceeded to the question of reight and be summitted that 50 cents a picul, the amount allowed, had been shown to be ample,

His Lordship said he would look into the natter, and he reserved his decision
